“It’s Always the Quiet Ones Who Hide the Biggest Secrets...”

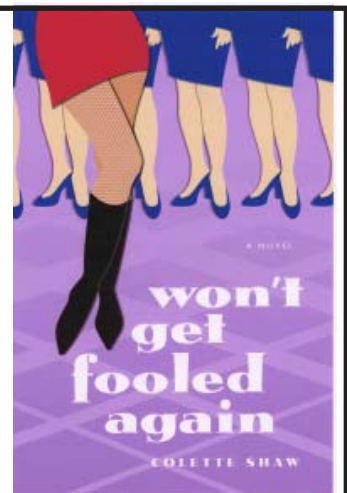

Readers of the new suspense novel by Lancaster, PA resident Colette Shaw may wonder about the similarities between her fictional work and her real life. While a college dean at Franklin & Marshall, Shaw penned Won’t Get Fooled Again, which many believe to be semi-autobiographical. Set in Lancaster, the plot follows the upheaval of a female business executive’s personal and professional lives when her secret rock & roll fantasies comes to light.

Shaw admits that her life loosely parallels that of her protagonist, Suzanne Curtis. “It took a long time to come to terms with my closet full of business suits and leather jackets, but I think a lot of people can relate to some type of double existence.” In fact, Shaw has found that her double life fits more closely than she would have imagined with her role as an educator. “I worked hard to help students identify and pursue their varied intellectual passions. I hope I’ve also found a way to help others explore their dueling identities .”

As for her choice to use Lancaster as the setting for her tale, Shaw is firm. “Lancaster City has it all – interesting personalities, a rich history, and all sorts of intriguing places to visit. It’s the best kept secret in Pennsylvania, if not the whole Northeast! Setting my novel here was a no-brainer. The locale turned out to be almost a character in itself, and placing the story there was the best way I could think of to pay tribute to my diverse and stimulating hometown.”

Won’t Get Fooled Again

When executive Suzanne Curtis’s rock & roll fantasy life spins out of control, she is thrust into a world of blackmail, betrayal, and the possible downfall of the company she loves. Two very different men sweep in to support her, each of whom appeals to a different side of her dualistic nature—but can she trust either one?
